Starting September 10 at PalaisPopulaire, Deutsche Bank is launching a new series of online and live talks with international artists from its collection, including Cao Fei, Axel Hütte, and Andreas Mühe

On the occasion of the exhibition Time Present – Photography from the Deutsche Bank Collection at Berlin's PalaisPopulaire, Deutsche Bank is launching the new talk series Deutsche Bank Collection Live – Meet the Artist starting September 10, 2020. The focus is on international artists from the corporate collection, who will discuss their work with art experts from the bank. Particularly in times when access to exhibitions featuring works from the Deutsche Bank Collection is limited, Deutsche Bank Collection Live – Meet the Artist creates a lively and direct access to contemporary art, its themes and discourses.

The talks, which take place both online and in the context of live events, offer participants the opportunity to engage in personal exchange with the artists from the collection. The new talk series will be continued on a permanent basis in the future and will accompany not only the exhibitions at the PalaisPopulaire, but Deutsche Bank's entire global art activities.

Deutsche Bank Collection Live - Meet the Artist kicks off in the context of Berlin Art Week on September 10 at 6 pm with an online conversation between the Berlin photographer Andreas Mühe and Friedhelm Hütte, the head of the Deutsche Bank Collection. Mühe, whose work revolves around subjects from twentieth-century German history and his own family, is one of Germany's most prominent art photographers. Axel Hütte follows on September 11 at 6 pm. Hütte is a representative of the so-called Düsseldorf School, which revolutionized the international photo scene in the 1990s. On the same day, at 11 am, Britta Färber, Chief Curator of the Deutsche Bank Collection, speaks with Cao Fei, one of the most important contemporary Chinese artists. Her film Whose Utopia? will be shown in the Atelier of PalaisPopulaire during Berlin Art Week.

Cao Fei is represented with her photo series of the same name in the current exhibition Time Present. For this series and the film, she accompanied the workers at a light bulb factory in the Pearl River Delta for over half a year. In workshops, she spoke with them about their wishes regarding the future and asked them to act out these ideas in performances at their workplace.

Other guests at the talks in the coming months will include Tokihiro Sato, Adrian Paci, Andrea Galvani, Martin Liebscher (live), Anett Stuth (live), and Mathilde ter Heijne (live). Some of the talks will be held as part of the European Month of Photography (EMOP) and all of the live events will also be streamed online.

The entire digital program is available on the PalaisPopulaire's website at #PalaisPopulaireForYou, including talks and guided tours of the current exhibitions, as well as readings and workshops for children and young people.
